Dear Reader,

This book contains a secret message, just for you.

It's up to you to decode the message, which you can find in the back of the book.

Look for the hidden RED letter on each page, then fill in the message by writing the letter on the line above the page number in the BACK the book.

Alternately, if you don't want to write in your book, just copy the message to a piece of paper and fill it in there.

Good Luck,
Ty

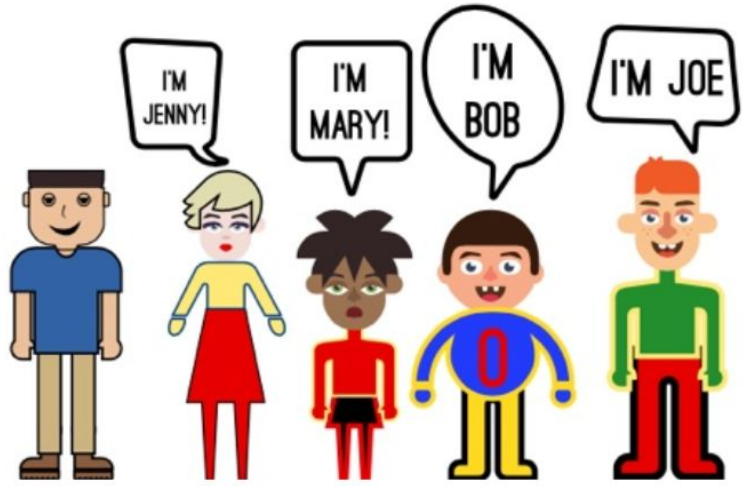
STEVE'S FRIENDS

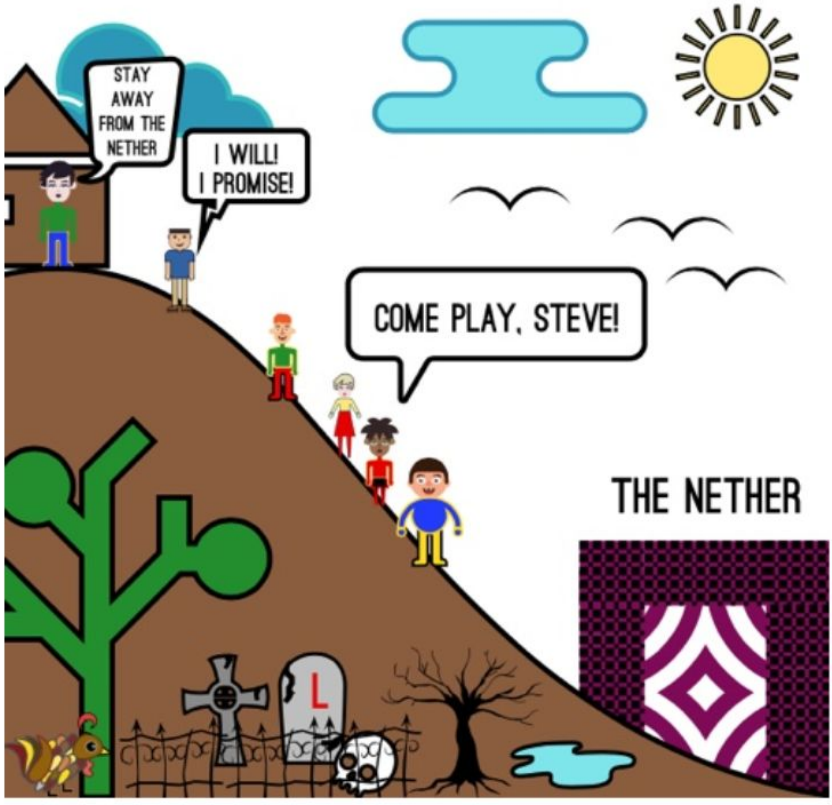


Steve has good friends, most you don't know.
There's Jenny, and Mary, and Bobby, and Joe.

His friends are so nice, they have lots of fun.
They all like to jump, and play games, and run.

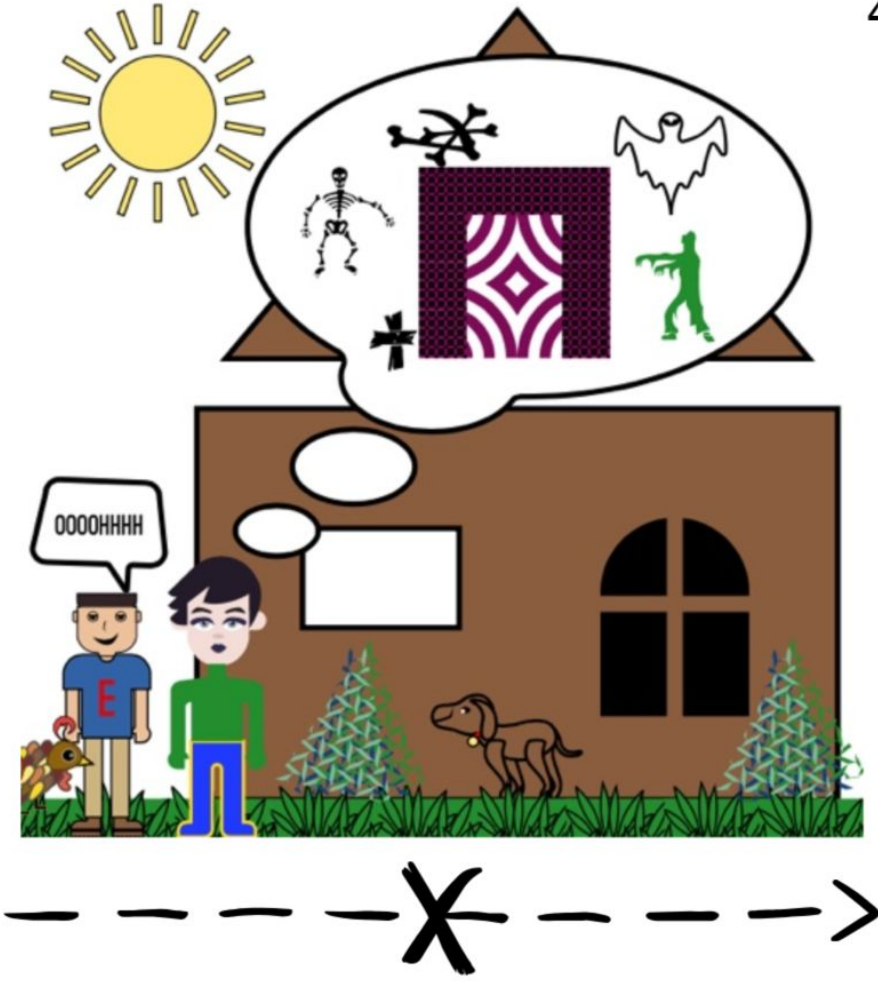
Sometimes though, they try to do
the types of things they shouldn't do.

When friends say yes, but mom says no,
what do you do, how does it go?



There is a place, it's called the Nether.
Steve can't go there, never, not ever.

His friends, you see, they're not allowed,
but they really do want to join the crowd.



“Mom, the Nether sounds like fun.
Why can’t I go? I’m not so young.”

“Steve,” Mom says, “listen close,
the Nether is bad, it’s full of ghosts.”

Õ

“Not just ghosts, or ghasts they’re called,
but things that’ll scare you completely bald"

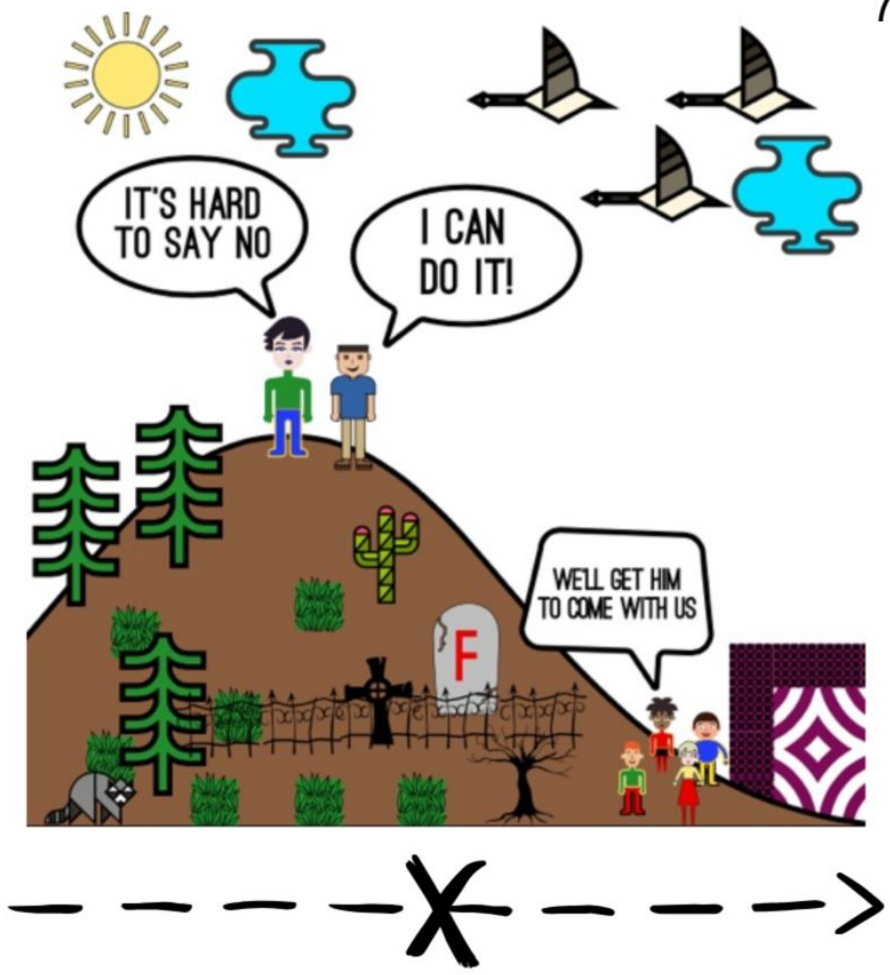
"I like your hair, it’s really nice, so I’ll tell you now, I’ll tell you twice."

Õ

"Stay out of the Nether, I'll say it again.
You don't want to mess with the zombie pigmen."

"You think it's cool, but really it's not.
It's dreary, ugly, dark, and hot."



"Okay," said Steve, nodding his head,
"I will find something to do instead."

"Please stand your ground, do not bend.
It can be very hard to say no to your friends"
